WHY STERLING FLATWARE

There always will be people who love gracious living, and sterling flatware is part of it.

From earliest times man places great value on the whitest of all silvery metals. Silver has always been a statement of the owner's station in life. Cleopatra, Queen of the Nile, valued silver even above gold.

Today, Sterling Silver retains the incomparable beauty of the white metal but adds to it a useful hardness making Sterling the highest mark of excellence.

Sterling silver flatware has an intrinsic value that becomes even more valuable with age. If anything, the patina of time only increases its beauty.

It makes people feel good to own the good things of life. Sterling flatware has its traditional place among the good things. Somewhere there's a place for beauty and warmth and pride of ownership in every one of us.

Now, the great renaissance era of the alloy called Sterling Silver is just starting.

Embrace yourself in Sterling luxury.

TRADITIONAL AMERICAN

Traditional American is yesterday, today and tomorrow.

Traditional American is yesterday — an understanding of the way the American colonists, achieving a new way of life, shaped their old world traditions of grace and beauty into new designs for American living.

Traditional American is today — our attraction to American decor is not a passing fancy. It manifests its timeliness by the success of Williamsburg, Old Sturbridge, Newport and other restorations throughout the country. And there's more to it than a natural, honest national pride. Traditional American is beautiful, functional and highly versatile. Within the grasp of this period are designs of both casual simplicity and gracious formality, and much that properly can be called a bit of both.

Traditional American is tomorrow. Its satisfying appeal is based on simplicity and distinctive design that has withstood and gained added recognition by the critical test of time. Our heritage endures.
